Lessons Learned

Based upon the after-action review led by the HCPS, the following lessons learned were identified:

1. When students and families promptly notify school officials of threats of violence made against the school or students it allows school officials to begin investigating the threat and conducting behavioral threat assessments¹ of those involved.
2. Preventing harm to the school community requires effective communication, coordination and collaboration among school, school system central office, and law enforcement personnel. School system emergency management standard operating procedures should be clear on how the school will address threats made against the school or school community regardless of how the threat is made (e.g., phone call, online) or the nature of the threat (e.g., bomb, shooting, chemical release).

3. School staff and law enforcement must be familiar with how to investigate and address online threats made against the school or student(s).

School Safety Recommendations

1. Md. Ed. Art. §7–1507(c) requires school systems to adopt a behavioral threat assessment team policy that is consistent with the State model policy.² Schools should annually train and test behavioral threat assessment procedures with school and law enforcement personnel.
2. Threat reporting and communication protocols, which allow rapid notification of critical staff and law enforcement, should be easily accessible and regularly tested. Schools should participate with law enforcement in annual discussion-based exercises³ that test their response to school threats. Additionally, schools should develop a mechanism to track corrective actions to completion.⁴
3. Maryland schools and school systems should continue to encourage students to report threats of violence to a trusted adult. Additionally, schools should provide students and families a mechanism to anonymously report threats of violence. MCSS provides all K-12 schools with access to Safe Schools Maryland,⁵ the State's anonymous reporting system.
